

EPA WaterSense Partnership

Arizona Water Company is proud to announce its partnership with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for its WaterSense program. This program is a collaboration between the EPA and water professionals across the country. The partners range from public and private water utilities, homebuilders, water device companies, and more. In 2022 alone, WaterSense partners have saved 1.1 trillion gallons of water!

We are excited to be a part of this wonderful program that will provide additional resources for our customers to learn more about water and become even better subject matter experts on water conservation. Additionally, the WaterSense website has an easy-to-use product search tool that will provide users with a list of WaterSense-labeled products for both indoors and outdoors.

The products listed range from smart irrigation controllers to showerheads, faucets, and more. The EPA WaterSense label on a product guarantees lower water usage compared to industry-standard products, while not sacrificing a powerful flow of water. On top of the physical water savings, WaterSense-labeled products have saved customers over $170 million on water and energy bills since 2006. Those are some seriously impressive numbers!

To commence its partnership with the EPA, Arizona Water Company has included two WaterSense products in its free conservation kit. Both the showerhead and faucet aerator are EPA WaterSense certified. This kit is available for customers in select service areas. Interested in receiving your free kit? Visit our page here or at <https://www.azwater.com/conservation/water-conservation-kit/>
